Thanks for your quick response, as always!

I understand the situation and agree with your strategy. I was going to look for the application to review and consider for sharing, but the position isn't posted on their website, which would be an important part of strategy in general.

That's why I mentioned it to Council so I could put some pressure on HR to work with me. A lot of times I just hear 'no' from people at the City without them really trying to help find a solution. I'm thinking that most people don't understand the management company situation and probably look for bus driver/mechanic jobs on the City's website.
