Cathy,

Please see the response from Acting General Manager, Ken Fischer; Joe Brooks is on medical leave. Per the contract, the company will not be paid for any missed revenue hours, and an additional $100 per missed revenue hour will be deducted from their monthly invoice.Â

Ely

Eli,

I have attached an outlineÂ of the events that led to the loss of the last two trips on theÂ E 1 1/2. In summary there wereÂ a total of six roadcals yesterday that led to using all theÂ spares available, including one 12 passenger cutaway bus. In response to the continuing maintenance challenges we will beÂ doing the following.

1. We have received the one additional 12 passenger cutaway bus. However, it came without registration and a license plate. We are working to make it available as soon as possible.
2. Future IRide Service Alerts will not use the language until further notice. They will include an anticipated amount of timeÂ the route will be out of service.
3. I will work with the ART Maintenance DepartmentÂ to develop a Maintenance Action Plan for your review. I would anticipate providing you with the plan by the end of next week.Â This plan will have an outline of action steps designed to minimize any future loss of service.

Let me know if you have any questions.

This is a major follow-up regarding the state of transit: The E 1-1/2 not running "until further notice." This being the back-up for the highest capacity route in the city means people are going to be passed by a full bus, not having any other option for an hour, then possibly at capacity even then.Â

Â

I can imagine the response from a rider reading this, but I'm still thankful the notices are going out. Many folks don't have access to this information or know it's available.
