That sounds wise.

Either way though, if they are able to fill them they need to either offer higher wages or improve their employment strategy.

That's why I mentioned it to Council so I could put some pressure on HR to work with me. A lot of times I just hear 'no' from people at the City without them really trying to help find a solution. I'm thinking that most people don't understand the management company situation and probably look for bus driver/mechanic jobs on the City's website.
